

ACTIVITY ROUND-UP

FROM THE BITS YOU'VE TOLD US

Yesterday afternoon we all headed off to 16 different activities, and we hope you all had a good afternoon! As you were all having such good fun we were only sent a handful of photos to share with you, so you're going to have to imagine the happy faces of SSAGO-ers at the other things, but imagining is supposedly good for you so we're doing you a favour really. In typical SSAGO style, not everything went to plan! The pot-spot team, despite having 2 staff members, managed to end up further away from Brighouse than when they started, after walking for half an hour. Although in their defence, the map and instructions they were given were a little misleading, and failed to mention the footpath out of the bottom of camp and the walk across the fields. A similar thing happened to the Geocaching team who were dropped off 30 minutes away from their actual start location! Thank goodness us scout and guide types are so good at navigating!

ASTROLOGY

CANCER: You have a Long journey ahead...

ARIES: You will read another horoscope in a newsletter.

GELOTOLOGY

How do you keep your sleeping bag from being stretched out?
Don't sleep in it too long!

You can't run on camp, you can only ran because it's past tents!

OTHER-OLOGIES

Tautology - the art of repeating in a different way

Campanology - the art of bell ringing

Hydrology - the study of water

Tautology - the art of saying things multiple times, slightly differently

THE ADVENTURES OF YELLOW MAN... AND FRIENDS

Although we do not have much to update on the life of yellow man, we can confirm he is still here, still smiling and still very yellow (although not as yellow as exec, we're not sure what they'd been drinking when they chose that colour!).

ANTHROPOLOGY (Snaps, Stories and Gossip)

You guys haven't sent us much since yesterday, so I guess that either means last night was so good you were all enjoying it too much to send us stuff. Nice to know we're easily forgotten!

We have been asked to congratulate Lexi Massey for getting out of bed on her own yesterday, apparently this doesn't happen very often at rallies! Well done Lexi!

James; if you're reading this could you... oh wait I know you're not reading this!

Apparently the sponges have not been found... we didn't know they were lost but well done for finding them!

SPORTS NEWS

As the evening wound down last night and many headed off to bed (very sensible really), others decided 1am was the perfect time to start running a few "sports day" style events. These consisted of a barrel moving race and an arm wrestling tournament, the details of the winners are as follows:

Barrel Racing

With only 5 contestants, this event lasted a considerably shorter time than the wrestling so I was still awake when it finished. Therefore I can confirm that the winner was Stuart who was also the founder of the event so that's nice for him, although at one point he was being beaten by 3 others, and as a mixed gender race he didn't like it. Due to the fast paced nature of this event we were unable to capture any of it for you, so if you went to bed early you missed out on this one... sorry.

Arm Wrestling

This event included considerably more participants, so here are the final runnings;

- 23rd - Lexie
- 22nd - Izzy
- 21st - Jane
- 20th - Elsa
- 19th - Lucy
- 18th - Ciara
- 17th - Niall
- 16th - Cat
- 15th - Liam
- 14th - Sam
- 13th - Lloyd
- 12th - Tim
- 11th - Tom
- 10th - Phil
- 9th - Owen
- 8th - Russell
- 7th - Josh
- 6th - Samira
- 5th - Dan from Liverpool
- 4th - Henry

And the top 3 were...

- 3rd - Tau
- 2nd - Ben
- 1st - Stuart.... Again!

Morning's Monopoly

Here's a few snaps from the Monopoly run yesterday, if you haven't shared your team's photos on Facebook then please do!

METEOROLOGY (Sunday's Forecast)

Sunrise 04:36 Sunset 21:40

